- Cooperate as requested in any investigation of a complaint in the event of an allegation of unfair treatment.

4.3 Unacceptable Behaviours

All Stanwell people are expected to behave fairly, respectfully, inclusively and equitably at all times. The following behaviours are specifically prohibited by Stanwell:

4.3.1 Bullying, harassment and vilification

Workplace bullying is repeated and unreasonable behaviour directed towards an individual or group that creates a risk to health and safety. Repeated behaviour refers to the persistent nature of the behaviour and can involve a range of behaviours over time.

Unreasonable behaviour means behaviour that a reasonable person, having considered the circumstances, would see as unreasonable, including behaviour that is victimising, humiliating, intimidating or threatening.

Bullying may also occur at the same time as unlawful discrimination, sexual harassment and may also be a breach of work health and safety laws.

Harassment - state and federal anti-discrimination legislation make it unlawful to treat a person less favourably on the basis of particular protected attributes such as a person's age, sex, race or disability. Treating a person less favourably can include harassing a person. Examples of harassing behaviours could include:

- Telling an insulting joke about a particular racial group;
- Sending explicit or sexually suggestive emails or text messages;
- Displaying racially offensive or pornographic poster or screen savers;
- Making derogatory comments or taunts about a person's disability; or
- Asking intrusive questions about someone's personal life, including his or her sex life.

It is important to understand that a one-off incident can constitute harassment.

Vilification is an unacceptable behaviour that:

- a) Happens in a public place; and
- b) is capable of inciting others to hate, to have serious contempt for or to severely ridicule individuals or groups because of their race, religion, sexuality or gender identity. Vilification is unlawful and in certain circumstances may be a criminal offence.

Stanwell prohibits any form of vilification or racist behaviour.

Workplace bullying and vilification can take many forms. Unacceptable behaviours could be based on, but are not limited to:

- | | | |
|-------------------------------|--|-----------------------------------|
| • race | • age | • impairment |
| • disability | • medical condition | • religion |
| • gender | • pregnancy | • union activity |
| • gender identity | • breastfeeding | • political affiliation |
| • sexual preference | • relationship status | • perceived political affiliation |
| • perceived sexual preference | • parental status or family responsibilities | |

4.3.2 Sexual harassment

Sexual harassment is unwelcome or unwanted behaviour of a sexual nature as a result of which a person feels offended, humiliated or intimidated and which would make a reasonable person feel offended, humiliated or intimidated. It may result from a single incident or a series of incidents. Sexual harassment is unlawful, and Stanwell will not tolerate such behaviour from our people.

4.3.3 Unlawful Discrimination

Unlawful Discrimination occurs when a person is treated unfavourably or is denied fair and equitable access to employment, training, development or advancement because of a particular attribute or personal characteristic without lawful reason.

4.3.4 Victimisation

Stanwell supports the right of our people to make a complaint under this policy without suffering victimisation, bullying, recrimination, or detriment as a result. It is unlawful to threaten or to treat an individual less favourably, in response to an actual or potential discrimination, bullying, sexual harassment or bullying allegation or complaint.

It is also unlawful to victimise someone who is a witness or who is supporting an individual who intends to or has made a complaint.

4.4 What is not an Unacceptable Behaviour?

4.4.1 Reasonable Management Action: A manager can make decisions about poor performance, take disciplinary action and direct and control the way work is carried out. Reasonable management action that is carried out in a reasonable way is not bullying, harassment or discrimination.

Single Incidents: Bullying involves a repeated or a pattern of behaviour. Therefore, a single incident is not considered to be bullying. However, it may have the potential to escalate and should not be ignored by workplace parties.

It is important to note that a single incident of harassing a person about a characteristic or attribute which is considered unlawful under state or federal anti discrimination legislation (sex, race disability or age) can constitute harassment.

4.5 Breaches

Breaches of this policy may lead to disciplinary action in accordance with the Managing Performance and Conduct Procedure and the Stanwell Power Station Enterprise Agreement 2015 (where applicable). Any failure to comply with this Policy will be taken very seriously. In certain circumstances, a breach of the Policy could be referred to an appropriate authority for investigation. A number of consequences could flow from a breach, including termination of employment or contract and prosecution.

Where a serious allegation has been made that could result in reprisals against the Discloser, the recipient of the information (such as the Manager or People and Culture) must treat the disclosure confidentially and immediately report the disclosure to the Whistleblower Protection Officer (Company Secretary), so that the information can be dealt with under the Protected Disclosure Procedure.

Intentionally false or misleading information must not be provided when making a disclosure of information about a breach of this policy or in connection with an assessment or investigation about a breach of this policy. Disciplinary action may be taken against anyone found to have intentionally provided false or misleading information. In some circumstances, providing false or misleading information could be a criminal offence.
